Important Announcements

- Please remember there is no admittance to the school if you return late from lunch. If you choose to go out to lunch, you MUST be back inside the building on time. 3rd block begins at 11:30. If you are locked out of the building because you're late, it is YOUR responsibility to get transportation home!
- As Spring approaches, please remember proper attire for school. Spaghetti straps, short-shorts, and low-cut tops do not follow the school dress code. If you are wearing anything too revealing we will ask you to cover up or send you home!

What is the Ides of March and why should we beware?

Elizabeth Weise, USATODAY Published 9:58 a.m. ET March 15, 2017 | Updated 1:32 p.m. ET March 15, 2017

SAN FRANCISCO — March 15 is the Ides of March. But there's no need to be on guard.

Julius Caesar probably should have been. But then, he blew off the soothsayer who told him to "beware the Ides of March" in the first act of Shakespeare's play. You might remember from English class that things didn't go so well for him.

What if Shakespeare's soothsayer had simply said, "Watch out a month from now!" Would anybody remember the line?

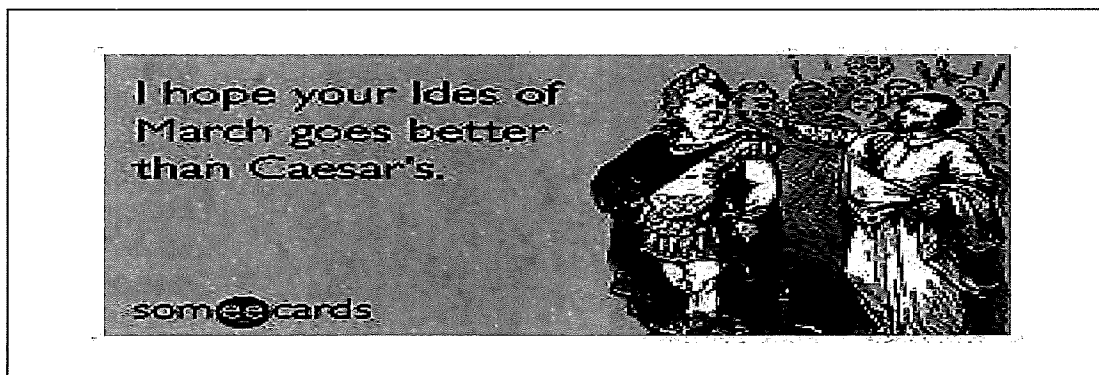

"Ides of March" has a better ring to it. And yet all it means is "halfway through the month."

Ides comes from an old Latin verb iduate, which meant "to divide." It was the Roman term for the day that came in the middle of each month. Every month has an Ides. March had 31 days, so the Ides of March is on March 15.

Julius actually got several warnings. Later on in the play there's a big storm. To find out what it means, he sends a servant to get priests to sacrifice animals and read the omens in their entrails. Their message is even clearer: Don't go out.

In best horror movie fashion he ignores them and, like an idiot, goes out. So it's no surprise when Brutus and some other conspirators waylay him on the steps of the Capitol and stab him to death.

But unless it's 44 B.C., you're a Roman Consul and ignoring omens right and left, you should be just fine.

"CCHS' very own Mrs. Pease was awarded the prestigious Teacher of the Semester award from our management company, Access Point. She was chosen out of 20 schools total. Teachers are selected for their dedication, professionalism, and making a difference in the education of our students. She received a plaque commemorating the honor along with a cash prize. A cash donation was also made to the school. Please join us in congratulating her on this much deserved honor. We appreciate you Mrs. Pease!"

Remember: CCHS has many after-school activities/clubs for those who are interested. Painting, Cooking Club, Knitting, Movies, and Dungeons & Dragons just to name a few. If any of these sound interesting to you, please ask your teacher.

Anger Is Like Gasoline

If you spray it around and somebody lights a match, you've got an inferno. [But] if we can put our anger inside an engine, it can drive us forward.
